U. S. Inventory Of Military Might Ordered By JFK

WASHINGTON (AP)—On direct order from President Kennedy, the United States Monday began a new weighing of its military might against a background of Communist saber-rattling over Berlin.

But from the diplomatic side came word that the whole perilous Berlin-German situation may go to the United Nations.

The Defense Department announced the re-examination and a few hours later White House press secretary Pierre Salinger confirmed earlier reports that the President ordered the callover as a result of Saturday's belligerent talk from Moscow.

Kennedy's decision was reached in Saturday conferences with his top defense and diplomatic lieutenants and the study began Monday, Salinger said. He added he did not know how long it would last.

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara announced the fresh examination of U.S. war capabilities. He called it the simplest precaution in the wake of Saturday's announcement by Soviet Premier Khrushchev that the Soviet Union is boosting its military spending and dropping plans to cut its armed forces by a million men.

U.N. May Be Called Upon

Secretary of State Dean Rusk said the whole question of Berlin might at some stage "come to the attention of the United Nations."

In a speech at the National Press Club, Rusk reiterated the long-held U.S. view that the Soviet Union has deliberately plunged the world into continuing crisis by seeking to "impose a world of coercion" on all non-Communists.

Rusk said "the underlying crisis arises from the fact that the Soviet Union did not join the United Nations, in fact as well as in form, and lend itself to the (peaceful) commitments they and the rest of us made in the midst of a great war."

Touching on the military aspect, Rusk said the United States is moving to strengthen the free world's ability to meet "the variety of dangers which have to be confronted."

Shortly before McNamara issued his statement, Deputy Secretary of Defense Russell L. Galt said a Senate appropriations subcommittee the re-examination was ordered by Kennedy, and that a factor in the decision was a display of advanced Soviet airpower in Moscow Sunday.

Must Re-Examine

Currently, McNamara said, "We are as strong—if not stronger—than any potential aggressor."

"But in the face of the inescapable realities that confront us, such as threats to dispossess us of our rightful presence in Berlin, we can do no less than re-examine our needs. This we are doing," he said.

The statement did not indicate what actions, if any, may be taken to beef up U.S. armed strength.

McNamara declared that "nothing that has developed in the U.S. or the free world calls for increased militarism." However, the fact that the Soviet Union proposes to increase its military spending cannot be overlooked. The simplest precaution calls for still another examination of our defense posture."

In his speech mixing threats with calls for negotiation, Khrushchev said the Soviet Union was suspending its previously heralded plans to cut Soviet armed strength from 3.5 million to 2.4 million men.

He also announced the Soviet government has decided to increase its defense allocations by more than $3 billion.

Spending earlier had been announced at about $12.4 billion—but U.S. experts believe billions for arms are concealed in other budget items.

At the latest report, the United States had 2.5 million men under arms.

The House has passed a bill ticketing $42.7 billion for defense spending. The Senate has not yet acted.

In building on the Eisenhower military budget, the Kennedy administration sought more missile-firing Polaris submarines, a bigger arsenal of long-range nuclear-tipped rockets, heavier conventional fire power, and a stronger capability for guerrilla wars.

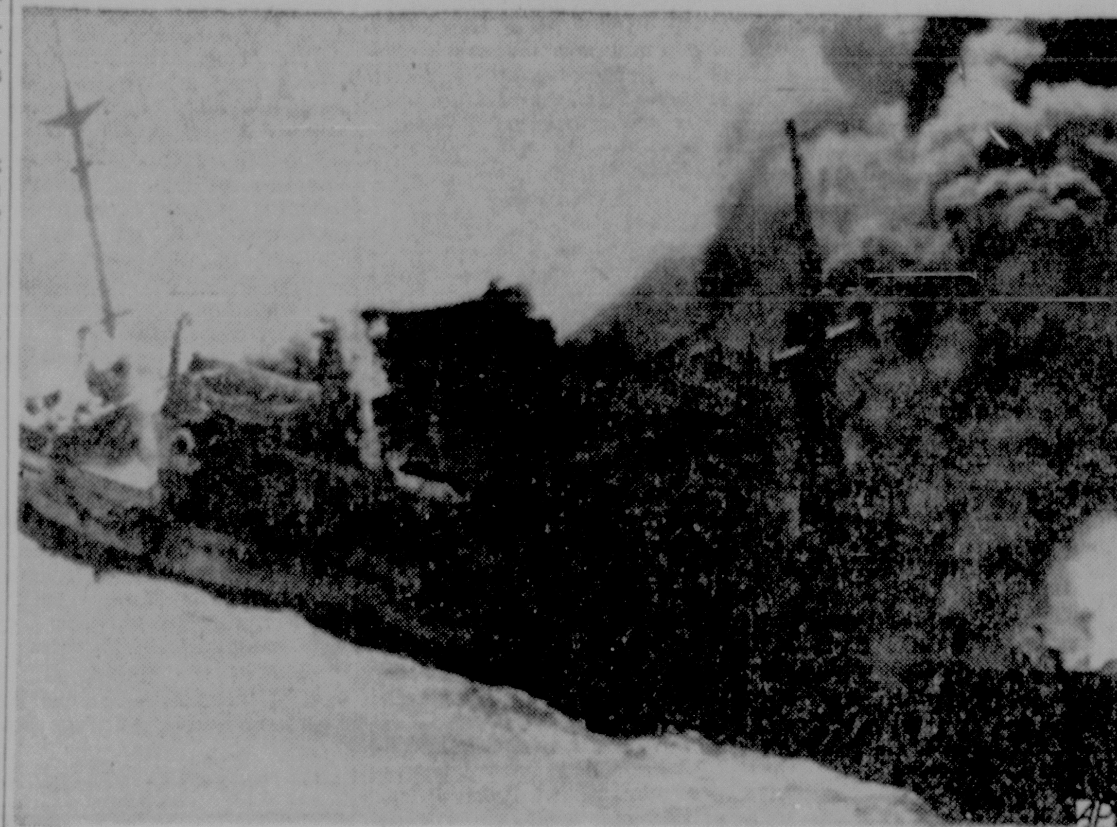

Over all, the President up to now, has asked an increase of only 25,000 men. It appeared the new defense survey ordered by Kennedy, may improve the Army's chances of gaining part of the 50,000 man increase it has been campaigning for.

U.S. Asked To Buy Peace

Many Of Saved Injured

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy asked the American people Monday to spend $4.8 billion on foreign aid. He said it would buy freedom, security, and peace.

"I'd much rather have us do it this way . . ." he said, "than to have to send American boys to do it."

Kennedy's appeal will be carried to the nation by the Citizens Committee for International Development.

The chairman, Warren Lee Pierson of Trans World Airlines, told Kennedy that the committee comprised representatives of industry, labor, education, and other areas of American life.

"We are going to do our best to see that the bill is passed," Pierson said.

Kennedy described the bill as "probably the most vital piece of legislation in the national interest that may be before the country this year."

Kennedy said that he could say, as former President Dwight D. Eisenhower once did, that if the United States fails to meet its responsibilities in the foreign aid program, "other countries must inevitably fail."

Business-Like Approach

In a statement of policy, the citizens committee said it considers Kennedy's proposal for long-term development loans "a modernized, business-type approach to foreign aid." The committee said this could be achieved without sacrificing annual reviews by Congress.

In the House, however, a formal stand was taken by Rep. Thomas M. Pelly, R-Wash., and 82 other representatives against loans financed by borrowing from the Treasury. Kennedy's bill provides that the development loans would be financed that way.

A statement by Pelly and the others—both Democrats and Republicans—said they would "vote against any legislation which provides for financing outside the regular appropriation process."

LOURENCO MARQUES, Mozambique (AP)—The storm, explosions and fire that destroyed the Portuguese ship Save left 237 persons dead or missing and presumed dead, maritime authorities said Monday. A total of 237 were saved. Many of these were injured.

Helicopters ferried survivors south to Beira and to Lourenco Marques, capital of this Portuguese east African territory, while the broken hulk of the 2,037-ton transport still smoldered on a wave-bashed sandbar near the Linde River estuary.

Grounded On Sandbar

The Save, named for another Mozambique river, grounded on the sandbar in bad weather Saturday, setting off blasts, metal-melting flames and a weekend of horror.

Disaster struck the ship near the end of a 200-mile cruise up the Mozambique channel from Beira to Quelimane. Blown by high winds and battered by high seas, the transport knifed into the sand only 10 miles south of Quelimane.

Maritime Ministry figures showed the Save carried 490 persons, including a 44-man crew.

The ministry said 219 passengers and 34 crewmen were among the survivors. Most of the dead and missing were Negroes. High seas washed some of the bodies to the swampy shore.

The storm was so severe that rescue vessels were unable to approach the burning wreck.

Some survivors reached shore by lifeboat. Others swam.

Shipping men called the Save, which was built in Scotland 10 years ago, a total loss. Below decks was a cargo that included tractors, cars, beer and military supplies.

A Maritime Ministry communiqué blamed the fire and explosions on a diesel oil leak ignited by a short circuit in the ship's wiring.

It said four white crew members were killed by a blast that erupted when they opened blazing No. 2 hold to determine the source of the fire.

Munitions were among the military supplies and the Lusitania news agency said the Save also carried dynamite and matches.

To Investigate

Two Portuguese shipping experts left Lisbon by plane for Mozambique to investigate the disaster.

Many survivors were reported suffering from exposure and burns. The waters are infested by sharks and the swamps ashore swarm with mosquitoes. Some who lived through the ordeal were housed in barracks, schools and homes of Quelimane.

Mozambique is a neighbor of South Africa and many of the miners among the passengers were reported returning home from work in the South African Witwatersrand gold mines.

Walter Wins Major Victory

(Special To The Record)

WASHINGTON — Rep. Francis E. Walter, D. Pa., won a major victory yesterday when the House voted 304-60 to amend the Immigration and Nationality Act.

Specifically, the Walter bill changes the judicial review of orders of deportation and puts an end to what the Eastern Democrat called a "mockery of our judicial process."

In presenting his bill on the suspension of rules calendar, Congressman Walter told his colleagues, "It is my belief that the Congress owes the American people the enactment of this bill as a measure of reasserting the nation's right to terminate its hospitality to its enemies and misbehaving guests."

Walter withdrew his plans to incorporate an amendment to the bill that would have affected the organization of the State Department's Bureau of Security and Consular Affairs.

The latter action was taken when the State Department announced that Salvatore Bontempo, designate of President Kennedy to the chief security post, had asked for a week's postponement of his swearing in, scheduled for yesterday.

Termed Not Qualified

Congressman Walter said Bontempo and Michael Cieplinski, selected to be deputy administrator, were not qualified by experience for the highly sensitive posts and that both appointments were strictly political.

In explaining his position on the bill to change judicial reviews, Walter said no person will be deprived of his day in court. The bill permits reviews in a circuit court and the Supreme Court, only once in each case, and according to Walter will halt pervert of the constitutional right of due process through which the worst alien elements—the subversives, gangsters and racketeers—are able to prolong their stay in this country.

The bill required a two-thirds majority on suspension of rules to pass. The vote was 5-1 to carry.

Nazi Propagandist Still Acting

'Axis Sally' Released From Prison

ALDERSON, W.Va. (AP)—Mildred Gillars, known as Axis Sally, now white-haired but still every inch an actress, swirled out of prison Monday as if dressed for a party. She headed westward toward Ohio and at least temporary obscurity.

It was a grand exit from the federal reformatory for women for the Nazi propagandist. Now 50, she was paroled after having served 12 years—dating from her conviction in 1949—of a 10-to-30-year term for treason. She had been in the reformatory here since August 1950.

War II Broadcasts

She became known as Axis Sally for her World War II broadcasts from Germany, aimed at trying to dishearten Allied troops.

She broadcast sentimental songs to the GIs while wandering about about the faithfulness of their wives and sweethearts back home. She aired the names of numerous prisoners of war. And she tried to embarrass American officers by disclosing supposedly secret Allied plans.

Monday she kept newsmen and photographers waiting for some 25 minutes before she was driven to the main gate.

Finally her sister, Mrs. E. E. Nieminen of Ashtabula, Ohio, pushed through the thin wall of newsmen and pulled open the car door. Miss Gillars turned and threw herself into her sister's arms.

After a few guarded comments, Miss Gillars and Mr. and Mrs. Nieminen walked hurried toward the Nieminen car, parked 25 yards outside the gate.

Miss Gillars didn't slow her brisk stride as the questions flew. Someone asked for a general comment.

"Well, after some 15 years in prison, what am I supposed to say," she answered.

She evidently was counting time awaiting trial as well as her years here.

Later, as she and the Nieminen came off the West Virginia turnpike at Charleston, Miss Gillars told a waiting newsmen she planned to "rest not more than six or seven weeks at the most" before taking a job. But she didn't say what job she had in mind.

During her three-month trial in 1949, Miss Gillars dramatically denied she had intended to hurt her native land, America.

For Man She Loved

She finally agreed to make the Nazi propaganda broadcasts, she said, for the man she loved.

The man was the late Max Otto Koischwitz, a naturalized American citizen and one time professor at Hunter College in New York. He had returned to Germany in 1939 and eventually became Miss Gillars' boss at the German overseas radio.

She was born in Portland, Maine. She tried to make a splash as a dramatic actress but didn't get past minor parts in road shows. So in 1929 she packed up and left for North Africa and Europe.

She did not return until she was brought back under indictment for treason in 1948.

Miss Gillars wore a black, head-hugging half-hat, black shoes, a light beige suit and a dark, three-quarter length coat. She carried a bright blue shawl.

Behind-The-Scene Dickering Reapportionment Takes Time Of State Solons

HARRISBURG (AP) — The touchy problem of congressional reapportionment took the legislative spotlight Monday in behind-the-scenes negotiations.

Democratic policy makers indicated that a tentative agreement had been hammered out at a two-hour meeting.

Further meetings were set for Tuesday.

Senate Majority Leader Charles

Weiner said the party leadership had worked out one plan calling for redrawing the state's present 30 districts into 26 with one congressman elected at large.

He urged the lawmakers to "tread cautiously" in handling the reapportionment problem.

Meanwhile, Senate Republicans offered a congressional reapportionment bill identical to one introduced in the House which was backed by the GOP state committee. It would eliminate one Democratic controlled congress seat and virtually eliminate two others by merging them with GOP dominated areas.

Will Lose 3 Seats

The state will lose three of its 30 congressional seats because of national population shifts recorded in the 1960 census.

Sen. James S. Berger, GOP floor leader, said he understood the Democratic plan being discussed would retain Philadelphia's present six congressional districts, though on a strict population revision the city would lose a seat.

"Any bill that retains six congressional seats in Philadelphia will not be acceptable to the republicans in the Senate," Berger declared.

Meanwhile, the Democratic leadership awaited word from U. S. Rep. William Green Jr., D-Pa., in Washington. The Philadelphia Democratic chairman is reportedly firmly opposed to any plan that would cost the city a seat.

Other developments:

Migrant Labor—On an 18-23 vote the Senate defeated a bill that would have established state control over migrant labor.

Judges Pay—Legislation to add an additional $653,000 a year to judges salaries was recommended by the Senate to the Finance Committee.

May Be Temporary

The move was expected to be a temporary measure. Committee members indicated they would return it to the floor soon for further action.

Professional Licensing—House Republican leadership introduced a resolution demanding a legislative investigation of the state's professional licensing procedure.

Rep. Albert W. Johnson, House GOP floor leader, said the move stemmed from the dismissal last week of William Kilroy, former administrative head of the Public Instruction Department's Bureau of Professional Licensing.

Meanwhile, Charles H. Boehm, superintendent of public instruction, Monday dismissed assistant Atty. Gen. George W. Schrock, Erie, from his $8,580-a-year post as counsel for the bureau. However, Boehm said the dismissal had nothing to do with Kilroy's firing. Boehm did not specify the reason for his latest action.

Martin Demands Evidence

HARRISBURG (AP) — Highway Secretary Park H. Martin Monday asked a Republican legislator to produce evidence of his charges of payoffs of highway inspectors or else make a public apology.

Martin said Rep. Thomas W. King Jr., R-Butler, so far has failed to supply any evidence to support his charges, made in a speech to the House on June 27.

Martin's comments were read to the House by Rep. Harry R. J. Comer, D-Phila., chairman of the House Highways Committee.

Martin disputed King's June 27 speech point by point.

What Has Become Of Old Summers?

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—A curious and by no means generally welcome weather pattern continued in Pennsylvania Monday. It

What might be appreciated as the cool of the evening is drawn out into a sharp chill of the night, and that definitely is not wanted.

Come sunup, however, and the air quickly moderates, with the day bright and warm in most places and helping to restore people's confidence in the calendar.

Sunday night was a prime example of why it appears that May or October may somehow have got misplaced in July.

All-time Lows

The mercury went down to 48 in Pittsburgh, the lowest there for the date since a 50-degree shock in 1895. In Philadelphia, the temperature was 54 at 6 a.m. That was an all-time low reading for the date in weather bureau records. The chilliest July 10 before that was 55 in 1890.

But that was balmy compared with Phillipsburg, in Centre County. The mercury sank to 35 there, only three degrees above freezing. By the weather bureau's reckoning, Phillipsburg was the second coldest place in the United States.

Forecasters said a high pressure area centered over Illinois is causing the low night temperatures. They added that the coolness will be around at least through Monday night.

Bill To Name Walter Dam

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Monday passed bills to give new names to the Kettle Creek and Bear Creek dams in Pennsylvania.

One bill would name Kettle Creek Dam in Clinton County after the late Alvin R. Bush, who served as a Pennsylvania House member from Jan. 3, 1951, until his death Nov. 5, 1959.

The other bill would name the Bear Creek Dam on the Lehigh River in honor of Rep. Francis E. Walter, D-Pa., who has served in the House since March 4, 1933.

Both bills now go the Senate.

Good Morning!

Failure and success have the same thing in common. You can't have either unless you've tried to accomplish something.

T-H Law Cool Off Granted

NEW YORK (AP) — Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan Monday granted the government an 80-day Taft-Hartley law injunction against renewal of the national maritime strike.

It prevents any further strike activity by five seamen's unions before Sept. 21.

Ryan dated the state of the 80-day cooling off period from last Monday, when he originally ended the 18-day strike with a restraining order.

The Taft-Hartley law process was invoked by President Kennedy. It was based upon reports by his fact-finders that the economy could ill afford continuance of the multimillion dollar strike of $2,000 seamen.

The government claimed that the strike tied up nearly 500 American ships in 30 port cities. More than 400 others rode out the emergency at sea.

Runaway Ships

Chief Justice that led to the strike June 15 was the demand of the unions for the contract right to organize so-called runaway ships—American owned vessels flying foreign flags.

Unions involved were the National Maritime Union, Seafarers International Union, Masters, Mates and Pilots Union, Marine Engineers Union, and the American Radio Association.

In granting a temporary Taft-Hartley law injunction, Judge Ryan held that "the pending strike is a peril to our national health and safety."

He directed the unions involved to continue collective bargaining in an effort to settle their differences before the expiration of the 80-day period.

Blasts Deans For Transfer Conspiracy

HARRISBURG (AP)—Sen. Benjamin R. Donolow contended Monday that deans of some Pennsylvania colleges and professional schools were interfering with the rights of students to transfer to other institutions.

The Philadelphia Democrat called for appointment of a five-man Senate investigating committee "to examine this entire vicious and undemocratic practice."

In an emotion-charged speech, Donolow declared:

"A preliminary investigation discloses that a number of professional schools and universities in the commonwealth have entered into a secret agreement whereby a student who is in attendance at one university or professional school is prohibited from transferring to another...unless the dean of the original school gives his approval..."

He singled out the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy in his floor remarks. Later, he told newsmen he understood the practice also prevailed at Temple University and the University of Pittsburgh.

He contended Dean Lynwood F. Tice of the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy "has ruined the education of more than 10 youngsters to date because of personal reasons only—not because of marks and not because of behavior—but because they wanted to transfer from his institution to another college."

Congressman Walter Advised

President Will Send Brodheads Watershed Project To Congress

Special To The Daily Record
WASHINGTON, D. C. — President Kennedy has advised Rep. Francis E. Walter that the Brodheads Creek Watershed Project will be included in a package deal the President will send to Congress later this week. The cost of the watershed project, Walter said, is $1,530,000. This project is one of 16 such projects throughout the country which Kennedy will send to Congress to be acted upon by the Senate and House Committees on Agriculture. Walter said the two committees will have to act favorably on President Kennedy's request before the Soil Conservation Service of the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture can begin work. Sparked Drive The 15th Congressional District Representative who has sparked the drive for watershed projects on a national level for several years hails Kennedy's action.

Planning for this watershed was authorized by Congress in April 1959," Walter said. "This outlay of more than one million dollars is nothing compared with the estimated $3,529,945 direct damage in this area during the Flood of August 1955. This does not include the estimated $9,822,100 total damage which occurred in Stroudsburg and East Stroudsburg plus the heavy loss of life."

Walter said "Commissioners of Monroe County and Pike County and officials in Canadensis, Buck Hill Falls, all of Barrett Township and the Stroudsburgs have shown great interest in the watershed project mainly from a flood control project viewpoint."

Sponsors of Applications The Monroe and Pike Soil Conservation Districts which include the Commissioners of the two counties are the sponsors of the application made to the White House.

The watershed makes up a majority of the Eastern half of Monroe County with a small portion of the uplands extending into Pike County. Walter explained, Brodheads flows in a southerly direction to Stroudsburg where it confluent with the McMichaels Creek a short distance from confluence of McMichaels and the Pocono Creeks. From this point it flows in a general easterly direction to a confluence with the Delaware River at a point above Delaware Water Gap.

The Brodheads Creek watershed will include portions of Stroudsburg and East Stroudsburg with the confluence with the McMichaels and above the same covering 90,432 acres all but 3500 acres of the watershed area is in Monroe County area.

An Outlook On Weather

Extended forecasts for July 11 through July 15:

Eastern Pennsylvania, South-eastern New York and New Jersey—Temperatures are expected to average 2 to 4 degrees below normal with little day to day temperature change. Precipitation may total 1/2 to 3/4 inch, occurring mainly as showers on Thursday and part of Friday.

Middle Atlantic State—Temperatures will average 2 to 4 degrees below normal. Somewhat warmer Tuesday and Wednesday. Cooler Friday and Saturday. Showers about Thursday will average around 1/2 inch.

Western Pennsylvania — Temperatures will average 4 to 6 degrees below normal. Warmer Tuesday and Wednesday, then cool through Saturday. Precipitation will average 1/2 inch, occurring as showers or thundershowers about Wednesday.

Woman 65, Shot During Holdup

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A woman, pretending to want a can of sardines, Monday looted a grocery store cash register of $50 after one of them fired a bullet through the right eye of the shopowner, Grace Orlando, 65-year-old spinster.

Although suffering from a wound which extended from the eye to the right ear, where the bullet came out, Miss Orlando remained conscious and told detectives what happened. She said as she turned back from a shelf, holding the sardines, the gunman fired. He was about five feet away. Miss Orlando was taken to a hospital for emergency surgery.

She said the men were negroes. 35,000 Trees Planted MEXICO CITY (AP)—Students carrying out beautification projects have planted more than 35,000 trees on Mexico City school grounds.

Jaycees Launch Campaign

THE POCONO Mountains Junior Chamber of Commerce officially launched its 1961 membership drive this week.

Ralph Bruneri, membership chairman, explained that the Pocono Mountains Junior Chamber of Commerce is a civic service organization for young men 21 to 35 years of age. It is composed of approximately 25 individuals. The Pocono Mountains Jaycees is a group which believes that young men can develop their leadership potential while working on active civic projects.

While the Jaycees conduct internal programs designed to improve the speaking ability of their members, etc., they are primarily concerned with learning which is acquired through active work for the Stroudsburgs.

No Ties Bruneri also explained that the Jaycees are not a branch of the Chamber of Commerce. There are no ties between the two groups, although the organizations do work together in many local communities.

The Jaycees are not an organization which restricts its membership to young executives or professional men. There are no occupational classifications.

Any young man who wants to serve his community is eligible to be a Jaycee. The Pocono Mountains Jaycees do not involve themselves in party politics, but it does take a stand on issues — regardless of how controversial they may be — which affect the welfare of the Stroudsburgs.

Any young man who is interested in obtaining further information may contact Ralph Bruneri at Hamilton 1-6675, or write post office box 241.

Grand jurors, to commence September 12 at 9 a. m., are: Elenore Cleary, Mt. Pocono; Virginia Doll, Stroudsburg RD 3; Harry Dorshimer, Saylorsburg; Esther Emanuel, Stroudsburg; William German, Shawnee; Betty Jenkins, Buck Hill

Houdaille Will Host State Unit

HOUDAILLE Construction Materials, Inc., will host to a joint meeting of the Pennsylvania Sand and Gravel Association and the Pennsylvania Ready Mixed Concrete Association on Thursday, Friday and Saturday at Shawnee Inn, Shawnee-on-Deleware.

Houdaille has operations at Portland, Easton, Stroudsburg and Stockertown.

More than 100 members, their wives and guests are expected to attend the convention. Kenneth E. Mayer, executive secretary of both associations and Russell S. Reimer, division sales manager of Houdaille's Portland branch, are in charge of convention arrangements.

The members will tour the Keystone Portland Cement mill in Bath on Thursday and will have lunch at the mill's rod and gun club. The Houdaille operations also will be toured.

Vincent P. Ahearn, managing director of both associations, will speak at a banquet Thursday on "The Washington Scene." He will be introduced by E. K. Davison, Pittsburgh, president of the National Sand and Gravel Association.

Mayer will give the "Harrisburg Legislative Review" at the banquet. Other speakers will be Charles A. Nicholson, president of the Pennsylvania Concrete Association and Charles A. Smith Jr., president of the Pennsylvania Sand & Gravel Association.

Richardson Talks At MORA Meet

MORA Club at its latest meeting greeted John Richardson, who has recently returned after a stay of several months in New England.

Richardson was given a big welcome by the club. In an address before the group, Richardson related honors paid him by a senior citizen group in Massachusetts.

Others given greetings were Harry Halterman, who was recently discharged from the hospital and Dewey Jacoby, of program committee, who observed a birthday.

President Burrows of the MORA Club and president Mrs. Frank Heller of the Leisure Hour Club announced that the two groups will hold their annual picnic tomorrow. The outing will be held at Pine Flats. All the members will leave from the YMCA at 2 p. m. by automobiles. Club members who own automobiles are requested to take them in order to provide enough transportation facilities.

At the meeting, a film "Science, Space and Time" was shown.

Whites, Negroes Clash At Beach

CHICAGO (AP) — Negro and white demonstrators yesterday duplicated Saturday's "wade-in" demonstration at the South Side's racially tense Rainbow public beach, traditionally an all-white facility.

About 70 waders—a third of them Negroes—arrived in mid-morning while 250 city policemen stood guard on or near the beach. A Chicago police boat cruised offshore in another show of strength.

Under the direction of Norman Hill, 24, a Negro, the members of the group dispersed through the beach and sat down on the sand in small groups. When they arrived, only about 300 persons were on the beach; shortly after noon the crowd had swelled to 3,000.

Divers Fail To Find Gun Used In Killing

EASTON — An all-day search yesterday failed to uncover a gun believed used in the killing of a Rahway, N. J., policeman but units of the New Jersey State Police skin-divers will continue to comb the Delaware River today.

Easton police detective Chester Pensyl, who is leading the search for the weapon, told the Daily Record last night he was still confident that Thomas G. Giamoni, 21, of Bangor was guilty of the crime.

Pensyl said the search will resume today. He said he did not know as of last night when

Bath Driver Injured In Area Crash

JOHN J. ZELLA, 37, of Bath was injured over the weekend when his car crashed into guard rails and plunged over an embankment along Route 590 near Hamlin, Wayne County.

He was taken to Wayne Memorial Hospital, Honesdale, in the Hawley Fire Co. Ambulance. His condition was listed as good yesterday.

Trooper Stanley Cimochowski of Honesdale State Police Substation said the victim, traveling east on Route 590, failed to negotiate a curve and crashed into the rails. The auto plunged through the barrier and toppled down a small embankment. The driver was thrown from the wreckage.

Also Hurt
Also injured near Hawley was Ronald C. Tolley, 33, of Ringoes, RD 1, N. J.

He suffered minor injuries Saturday at 8:30 a.m. in a two-car crash on Route 6, three miles west of Hawley. Trooper Edward DeFebo, of Honesdale State Police said Tolley's car went out of control, crossed the road, struck an embankment and rebounded into the rear of a car driven by Gerald J. Burdick, 16, of Main St., White Mills.

Williams Named To Bangor Unit

BANGOR — Charles Williams was named a member of the Bangor Borough School Board at its meeting last night, replacing Mrs. Shirley Matlock, who resigned.

Clair Peiffy, a member of the board, was named to replace Mrs. Matlock on the joint school committee.

In an effort to reduce its cost of transportation, the board authorized advertisement for purchase of three new school buses. More than $7,000 was spent during the 1960-61 school term on transportation.

William Baskwill reported on the Summer recreation program being sponsored by the board and Bangor Borough Council.

Plans were made to send a delegate to the school directors' conference at Indiana State College from July 21 to 23.

The Bangor Borough Sewer Authority gave the following assessments for borough school buildings: McKinley, $1,200; Roosevelt, $1,025, and the high school and Lincoln buildings, $4,050.

Mrs. Sevinson Dies At 86

MRS. ELLA Florence Sevinson, 86, widow of the late John H. Sevinson, died last night at the Kresge Nursing Home, Poik Twp. She had been in failing health for a year.

Mrs. Sevinson was a native of Carbon County but had resided in Monroe County most of her life. She was a member of the Seventh Day Adventist Church, Stroudsburg.

Surviving are four sons, Fred, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.; Carl, East Stroudsburg; Leon, Snydersville and William, Orlando, Fla.; and a daughter, Mrs. George Scutter, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Also three grandchildren and two half-sisters, Mrs. Edith Christian, Stroudsburg; and Mrs. Mabel Dinsen.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 2 p.m. from the Lanterman Funeral Home, East Stroudsburg. Interment in Stroudsburg Cemetery. There will be no visitation.

4 Burglaries Reported In Eastburg

EAST Stroudsburg police yesterday reported burglaries at four Washington St. business places over the weekend.

Approximately $13 in cash was taken from a cash register in the tailor shop of Raymond O. Mansfield, 7 Washington St. Also entered were City Cut Rate Store, 35 Washington St.; Edna F. Ehrgood Beauty Shop, 43 Washington St. and Stroud Paint, Inc., 39 Washington.

Police said the burglaries occurred Saturday night or early Sunday.

Broke Screen Door
The burglars broke a screen door at Mansfield's, removed a panel of glass from the main door, reached through and unbolted the door. The other buildings were entered through windows. At the beauty shop, entrance was into a washroom where a locked door blocked the burglars from the remainder of the building.

Murphy New Knights 21st District Aide

JAMES A. Murphy, Stroudsburg, a member of the Father Butler Council Knights of Columbus has been notified of his appointment to serve as District Deputy of the 21st Pennsylvania District of the Knights of Columbus.

The announcement and appointment was made by Warren F. O'Donnell, state deputy, Pennsylvania State Council.

Flory served as mayor during the 1955 flood and took a leading role in the critical rehabilitation period that followed. An outspoken advocate of flood control, he has worked closely with state, county and Stroudsburg Borough officials in sponsoring the present flood control program for Brodheads Creek.

He and the East Stroudsburg Council have also cooperated with Stroudsburg and Stroud Township in setting up two joint ventures—the sanitary landfill method for disposing of garbage and the police control center.

Before being elected burgess, Flory served on the Playground Committee and the Police Civil Service Commission.

Civic-minded
Civic-wise, he was president of the Monroe County Community Chest two years, on the board of directors 10 years and served one year as campaign chairman and one as co-chairman. He is a member of the Pocono Mountains Chamber of Commerce, a former president of the Stroudsburg Rotary Club and was an elder of the East Stroudsburg Presbyterian Church a number of years. He is also a long-time director of the East Stroudsburg National Bank.

Flory and his wife, the former Ella Lieb, are the parents of four children, Edward, who was graduated in June from Penn State University and is now employed in landscaping work at West Grove, Pa.; Richard, a June graduate of Dickinson College and now awaiting a call to the Regular Army; Ruth and Susan, both of whom were graduated in June from East Stroudsburg High School and are enrolled at East Stroudsburg State College for the Fall term.

Not Seeking Re-election
Next Dec. 31, he will complete his second four-year term as mayor, formerly burgess, of East Stroudsburg. He is not a candidate for re-election.

During his terms in office, the borough started its urban redevelopment program, adopted the borough management plan of municipal government and launched the program for installing sanitary sewers and rebuilding a modern sewage disposal plant.

Competition Brings Back 'Butchie'

DELAWARE WATER GAP—Butchie has returned. A lot of people never knew he was gone, but he was.

And the two people most concerned were elderly Mr. and Mrs. Paul Zschack of Walnut Lane, Delaware Water Gap.

Butchie was and is their pet parakeet who commanded the household for the past five years. He fluttered about as he pleased — without care or restrictions. He even answered back when he felt like it.

Suddenly, and without a whisper of an adieu, the male bird flew his domain. He was missing six days. The Zschacks had given him up much to their disappointment. It wasn't like their feathered friend to do such a thing.

The Zschacks, along with neighbors, searched the woods, all around the house and parts of the neighborhood. There was no trace of Butchie.

Days passed and the Zschacks advertised his disappearance on the local radio station. Still no results were forthcoming.

Purchased Another
The Delaware Water Gap family finally made a desperate move. They purchased another parakeet. This eased the feeling somewhat but they still thought of Butchie.

Perhaps observing in the wild blue yonder, Butchie knew what was taking place. On Sunday—six days after his flight and two days after another parakeet was purchased—he returned.

Neighbors saw him flickering back and forth in the trees near the Zschack's home. They watched him carefully. A short time later the Zschacks returned home from a Sunday dinner and were notified.

They entered the house and opened the door.

Butchie, without coaxing, swooped down from the trees, through the garage, through the breezeway and zipped straight for his cage.

Butchie's return caused a minor problem, although everyone was happy. The Zschacks now had two parakeets. They decided to give THE OTHER one away.

As of yesterday Butchie was sleeping quietly. He isn't even talking. All he does is rest.

Where were you, Butchie? Tell us like the stool pigeons do.

Lifesaving Classes At E-Burg

JUNIOR AND senior lifesaving classes will start today at the East Stroudsburg Playground pool. Director Lewis Hastie reported last night.

Both classes will last from 6:30 to 8 p.m. each night Monday through Friday.

The junior class is for children 12 through 15 years and will cover 15 hours of instruction. The seniors, 16 years and older, will have 17 hours of instruction.

Those who pass will receive junior or senior lifesaving badges presented by the Red Cross.

Hastie said the classes will be under the supervision of Richard Merring, a life guard who is certified in lifesaving and water safety. Assisting him will be Ronald Ellsweig, who holds a senior lifesaving certificate.

Memory is a priceless possession. Preserve it permanently—visibly—beautifully in stone.

Nixon's Dilemma

Riding a hot political seat these days is former Vice President Richard Nixon. He is faced with one of the most difficult decisions of his life: whether to enter the 1962 gubernatorial race in California.

Following his defeat for the presidency, Mr. Nixon was faced with the choice of either returning to California and immersing himself in that state's political wars, or accepting the presidency of a university or large business firm and avoiding day-to-day state politics.

The former vice president chose to return to California and assume the leadership of the state's Republican party.

A major reason for Mr. Nixon's decision was his feeling that the Republican party must be revitalized from the grass roots up if it is to remain an effective force in California — where Democrats vastly outnumber Republicans in registration—or in the nation as a whole.

There are compelling reasons why he should enter the governorship race next year—and there are just as many reasons why he should stay out of the campaign.

Many Republicans believe he is forced to run if he hopes to keep in the public eye and retain his political stature.

Others are just as sure this could be political suicide—and well it could be if he lost to the Democratic incumbent, Edmund G. (Pat) Brown.

No matter which way Mr. Nixon finally decides, his action will have a tremendous impact that will extend far beyond the boundary lines of California. Americans of all political faiths—in fact, people the world over—will be watching with intense interest to see if and how the former vice president solves his dilemma.

Social Security Extensions

With virtually every session of Congress the benefits paid under the Social Security Act become — to paraphrase an expression by Alice in Wonderland—"generous and generous." It would indeed be "curiouser and curiouser" if this process could go on indefinitely.

In the amendments just signed by President Kennedy the Senate and House have recognized that there will be additional costs and that these should be met with new revenue.

They have added one-fourth of one per cent (half on employers, half on employees) to the six per cent now collected on earnings up to $4,800.

Will not the gradual rise of these payroll taxes reach a point which represents as high a percentage of the national product as is suitable to allocate for retirement and welfare purposes? If so, the broadening of benefits must some time taper off.

One change introduces an element of flexibility which may have uncertain results. This is the provision allowing men as well as women to retire on a reduced benefit at age 62 instead of 65.

This earlier retirement stretches the span over which a limitation on earnings applies. Will there then be increased pressure to permit partial self-support and to keep useful people at work during this period?

Or might there be value in graduating the scale both ways from 65, and providing a slight reward in increased payments for those who work to a later retirement age?

George Sokolsky Says . . .

Permanent War

Karl Marx anticipated the permanent war in the very nature of the class struggle, the racial struggle, the death of imperialism. Lenin said:

"The means of combatting war are not a strike against war, but the formation of revolutionary nuclei in the combatant armies, their training for the purpose of bringing about revolution."

Admiral Zacharias, in his study of Russian policy and its effect upon the United States, entitled "Behind Closed Doors," and published in 1950, wrote:

"This means that Bolshevik Russia wants war because the revolution is not possible without war and Russia's survival is not possible without world revolution."

"But this also means that Bolshevik Russia wants war on its own terms and will unleash it only when those terms are secured and the preconditions of the 'just war' are fully assured. On this grand theory of war is based Stalin's own operational master plan. From it developed his world revolutionary theory, the Stalin doctrine."

Zacharias was perhaps our principal intelligence officer and was, quite naturally, not taken too seriously because he knew what he was talking about.

The Stalin doctrine was clearly blueprinted in his works and despite Krushchev's denunciation of Stalin during the 20th Congress, the Stalin doctrine is the guiding principle of Soviet conduct at the present time. According to Stalin, the World War had to have three stages:

1. The socialist war led by Soviet Russia. This effort has been remarkably successful and has now spread to every continent. Its influence upon the intellectual classes in all countries has been enormous, particularly in the weak and backward countries.

2. The Imperialist war, led by the Anglo-Americans. Stalin expected that this would involve Soviet Russia in major difficulties. As a matter of fact, both Great Britain and the United States compromised with Stalin, giving up point after point and getting nothing in return.

Besides, the British and Americans became involved in basic differences, such as the recognition of Red China and the Suez Canal fiasco. Also, the British could no longer control their dominions and Commonwealth countries, as for instance, Canada, which imperils the American policy concerning Red China and Cuba.

The Anglo-American leadership has not proved to be a stumbling block against Soviet Russia; it has indeed been only moderately successful.

3. The third phase that Stalin foresaw was the colonial wars—the uprising of the colored peoples who would seek political and social equality. Stalin did not have foreseen that the United States would risk impoverishment by the Marshall Plan and other aids in an effort to assist the weak and backward nations to establish themselves as independent states.

While the United States has not been altogether successful in this effort, it has nevertheless impeded the ability of Soviet Russia to take advantage of the wasteful strife which inevitably arose as these small countries emerged to equality.

The Stalin doctrine remains the controlling factor in Soviet planning and thinking. The revolution can only succeed by the clash of contending interests. A placid, conforming people do not engage in revolution. A frightened people do not engage in revolution although they may plot in underground.

Khrushchev's policy of co-existence has been rejected by other Communist leaders, particularly by Mao Tse-tung of China and quite rightly so. In a prolonged period of co-existence, the pull will be in the direction of modified capitalism.

This trend is already appearing in Soviet Russia. Capitalism, in any form, tends to lead in the direction of individualism, to the rights of man over the authority of the state. For Red China, for instance, this is a greater peril than war. It is for this reason that Mao Tse-tung and Khrushchev have fallen out.

Their quarrel over the method of conducting the Permanent Revolution has confused the Western powers which have permitted themselves of wishful and hopeful thinking that they might still defeat Soviet Russia by stimulating a war between Soviet Russia and Red China.

However, such a war would force, as it already has, Khrushchev to compromise with Mao Tse-tung and both together would join in a war against Western powers.

If a shooting war it has to be, it makes more sense for the Communists to fight the West than to fight each other. While Khrushchev wants to achieve the Permanent Revolution without war and Mao wants to achieve it by war, it is nevertheless the Permanent Revolution and not peace that they seek.

The Pennsylvania Story

Program Doomed

By Mason Denison
Harrisburg — Note to school-boy Johnny's parents:

Notwithstanding all the words that have been written; notwithstanding all the words that have been said; notwithstanding all the political hot air that has been generated on both sides of the legislative political aisle — indications are that the once loudly-touted educational report on beefing up Pennsylvania's lagging school program is destined by the wayside.

With a Legislature chomping at the bit to go home in a splash of final adjournment for the year; with nearly 150 recommendations by the special study committee to be considered, you don't throw together a batch of legislation in a push and pover within a few days or few weeks and come up with anything other than confusion and legislative potholes.

The simple fact remains that as of this mid-July date the bulky, extensive and comprehensive report of the Governor's Special Education Study Committee — with its host of far-reaching recommendations — is still just that: a bulky, extensive and comprehensive report.

It is true that the Lawrence Administration has piddled along as best it can in putting into effect the comparatively few committee recommendations that can be handled by an administrative flip of the switch.

But these administrative actions are not the heart of the report; they are not the juice of the educational study beef-up recommendations; they are not the primary and basic changes that really count.

These items can be handled only by legislative decree — not executive decree.

And what has the Legislature done? It can best be summed up in one word — fiddled.

Meanwhile Pennsylvania's legislative leaders — on the administration side at that — continue to harp on the subject of final adjournment, as though that for some reason is the most critical item of concern.

After all, the Legislature was created by constitutional decree to meet and act — not to adjourn.

So far the members of the lawmaking "profession" have not acted on the educational story — and if they don't act in this session, when will they act?

The answer of course is as academic as it is moot — but from the mechanical standpoint, they can't act on it next year because the 1962 session must be devoted exclusively to fiscal matters.

That leaves it up to the 1963 session — unless of course the Governor should really decide to crack the whip (a completely foreign usage for Mr. Lawrence who prefers quiet and peace) and call lawmakers back (if they adjourn) into a special session.

And a special session means additional taxpayer expense.

That then is the status of the much ballyhooed (on the part of the administration) comprehensive and far-reaching educational report turned in by the Governor's special study committee.

Is the report destined to be another of those horrifying down-the-drain episodes over which politicians have made such great capital in the past — at taxpayer expense?

Reluctantly we concede that this column warned of this fate at the time the committee was named. Up to this point at least this — tragically — has been amply borne out.

Seemingly it's past time for Pennsylvania's well-clobbered taxpayers to bang some legislative knuckles. Lawmakers come up for office next year!

Good to see Don Rayburn back on his feet again after two seiges which sent him to Monroe County General Hospital.

The Stroudsburg resident is looking fit as a fiddle, looking the picture of health.

Stroudsburg's grid great of not too long ago, Mickey Stevens has returned from a month-long journey to the West Coast.

Mick and his family drove to the State of Washington to visit his brother. Naturally, the Stroudsburg residents took in all the sights enroute and back from the side of the United States that borders the Pacific Ocean.

Ray Welsh, former head basketball coach at East Stroudsburg State College, topped the basketball instructors at the recent All-American Sports Clinic at Kutztown's Country Club, Monticello, N.Y.

Ray, a Stroudsburg resident, talked and demonstrated for three hours on baseball, stressing the fundamentals of the diamond game.

Welsh is one of the reasons the Pittsburgh Pirates shot to the National League and world championship last year. He got the Buccos in shape for the '60 pennant drive and also brushed-up the Pittsburgh nine on the so-called small stuff that wins ball games.

Ever hear of a raft on pontoons? Well, three area men have put together such a water house on the Delaware River, Kittatiny Beach.

The builders are Les Klass, Joe Hopkins and George Briggs. The trio make their home during the summer months on the above-water invention. Thus far, everything has been okay. At least no leaks have been reported.

When Johnny Addie, the fight and wrestling announcer, visits the Poconos, his friends are sure to get a few laughs.

Recently Johnny visited Walt Fossa at PMI in the Sky. While holidaying the ring speller called on his buddy, Tom McGuire, Swiftwater's postmaster.

Tom's been a wrestling and boxing fan for many years and all of Addie's banter brought back memories not soon forgotten.

Here is one of Addie's tales: In a semi-final bout at Yankee Stadium when Sugar Ray Robinson was fighting the main event, a particular boxer was getting belted consistently.

To test whether a fighter can continue, the referee will go to his corner and ask the victim his name, and if he knows where he is?

In this case the reply was, "I'm Joe Doaks and I'm in Yankee Stadium and I'm a better catcher than Yogi Berra. I haven't missed one yet!"

The Allen-Scott Report

U.S. Relaxes Ruling

By Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott

Washington — The State Department is preparing to let down the bars to permit U.S. and relief organizations to go to Red China — if they will be allowed to enter.

These organizations include the Red Cross, CARE, National Council of Churches, and The Evangelical Foreign Missions Associates.

Whether they will be admitted by the Chinese Communists is unknown.

In 1959, the late Secretary of State Dulles offered to give passports to a select number of U.S.

newsmen for assignment to Red China. But Peking sharply rejected this proposal and nothing came of it.

Since then the Reds have allowed a few close relatives of imprisoned Americans to visit them. But no other U.S. nationals have been admitted.

Purpose behind the impending State Department move is to bolster this country's opposition to granting Red China a seat in the United Nations. This long-pending issue is again slated to come up at the session of the General Assembly that convenes in September.

Up to now, the U.S. has kept Red China out of the UN by the strategy of blocking that question from being debated. But in recent years this tactic has succeeded by an ominously dwindling margin.

At the coming General Assembly meeting it is highly doubtful whether the U.S. can muster even a bare majority.

A backstage poll of UN members has disclosed a disturbing trend against the U.S.

In an effort to counter this adverse situation, chiefly among the neutral and uncommitted countries, State Department authorities decided on the plan to allow relief and charitable organizations to go to Red China.

It is believed that will have the effect of putting Peking "on the spot."

How It's Figured — If the Reds rebuff the U.S. overture, they will lay themselves open to the damaging charge of being uncompromising and obstructive. This could have a decisive effect in a tight UN count.

However, should the Communists grant entry visas, State Department officials contend the U.S. stands to gain by being able to obtain first-hand information about food and other crucial conditions in China. In the past few months, Peking has admitted grave grain shortages and has bought around $500 million of wheat from Canada, Australia and other countries.

In formulating the State Department's plan, consideration was given to including businessmen and labor representatives.

But this was dropped at the urging of Undersecretary of State Chester Bowles.

The former Governor of Connecticut, who is directing this policy, held that inclusion of business and labor would inject factors that had best be avoided at this time. Bowles advocated that at the start the proposal be limited to charitable and relief groups of long-established and non-controversial reputes.

Secretary Dean Rusk and Senator J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, agreed with Bowles.

Fulbright also assured Rusk and Bowles he will support their plan in the Senate.

It does not require congressional approval. It can be put into effect by the State Department, as Dulles did when he proposed sending a limited number of U.S. newsmen to Red China.

The Kennedy Administration has carefully avoided making a direct offer of food or other help to Red China, on the very sound theory that such a move would, on one hand, be vehemently rejected by the Communist rulers of Peking and, on the other hand, stir equally torrid opposition in the U.S.

However, privately, the administration is known to be ready to send surplus farm products to China — on the condition that their distribution would be wholly under U.S. control, either through official representatives or recognized charitable and relief organizations such as the Red Cross or CARE.

New Indian Chief — Philo Nash, former Wisconsin Lieutenant Governor, is slated to be named head of the Indian Bureau, replacing John Crow, who has been serving as Acting Indian Commissioner.

Nash supported President Kennedy in the 1960 primaries. . . . The staff of the U.S. embassy in Moscow is getting a significant addition — a political officer. A major function of this new staff member will be to "study and report on Soviet-Chinese relations."

The State Department now has 75 career foreign service officers capable of reading and speaking Chinese. They are graduates of a Chinese language school maintained by the Department on Formosa. The school graduates a number of Chinese-speaking junior foreign service officers each year. The largest number of these specialists — ten — are stationed in Hong Kong, where they keep a close eye on Red Chinese publications of all kinds, monitor Peking radio reports and obtain other first hand data and intelligence.

Inside You And Yours

Unmagic Touch

"Nail polish?" shrieked Jane. "My eyes and neck are broken out, not my fingers!"

Fingers often rub eyes and scrape necks, which break out when you're allergic to the touch—contact dermatitis — of nail polish.

Don't confuse contact dermatitis with ordinary irritated skin. Acids, alkalis and some saps irritate all skin. You have to be allergic to suffer contact dermatitis.

The skin reddens and tiny blisters break out on the face, neck or arms—any area not protected by clothing. You'll break out under clothing if you're allergic to a dye or a fabric.

Other Symptoms The blisters swell, ooze and harden into crusts. Sometimes your skin thickens into rough hippopotamus hide.

The size and shape of the rash helps pinpoint the cause. On the fourth finger left hand, suspect the gold or nickel in wedding bands. But if the same rash breaks out around the wristwatch buckle or metal garters, put your money on nickel.

Be Cautious Meanwhile, stay away from suspected materials, including irritating soaps. Remember that heat and sunlight can trigger new flare-ups. If you have to touch allergic material, wear a mask, apron or gloves. Or apply a silicone cream to coat your skin with an invisible protective barrier.

Don't scratch, press, and the rash won't spread. Both calamine-like lotions and antihistamine medicines soothe itching.

Soaps And Creams

Your doctor can prescribe soaps to dry oozing and cortisone-creams to melt the rash. Jane still polishes her nails, but with a different brand. And her eyes and neck have cleared.

Like Jane, you, too, can have a blamish-free skin, even though it carries that unmagic touch.

Unwelcomed Guests

Dear Abby: My wife and I traveled 1,200 miles to visit some relatives we hadn't seen in 30 years. We were quite surprised to see how they were living. We knew they weren't rich, but you don't have to be rich to be clean.

We were put up in an attic "guest room" and roaches and bedbugs had run the place over. Some bugs got into our clothes and suitcases. We were polite and stayed out the week. We invited them to return the visit, but we don't want them in our home because they might bring the bugs with them. Would it be rude to put them up at a motel even though we have a nice unoccupied guest room at home?

COUNTRY COUSINS
Dear Cousins: Put them up at a motel and offer no apologies. (P.S. You must be itching to see these people again.)

Dear Abby: My husband is his mother's "favorite child." Our five-year-old daughter is her favorite grandchild. I object to this favoritism because it is so obvious it is sickening. We have two other children whom she ignores completely. When one of our other children has a birthday, this stupid grandmother will come with a simple little gift for the birthday child, and a very expensive and lavish gift for the favorite child "so she won't feel left out." But she doesn't do this for the other children. She takes her favorite grandchild to her home for weekends, and is teaching her to call her Mother, and me by my first name. My husband is as annoyed over this as I am, and says anything I decide to do about it is all right with him. What should I do?

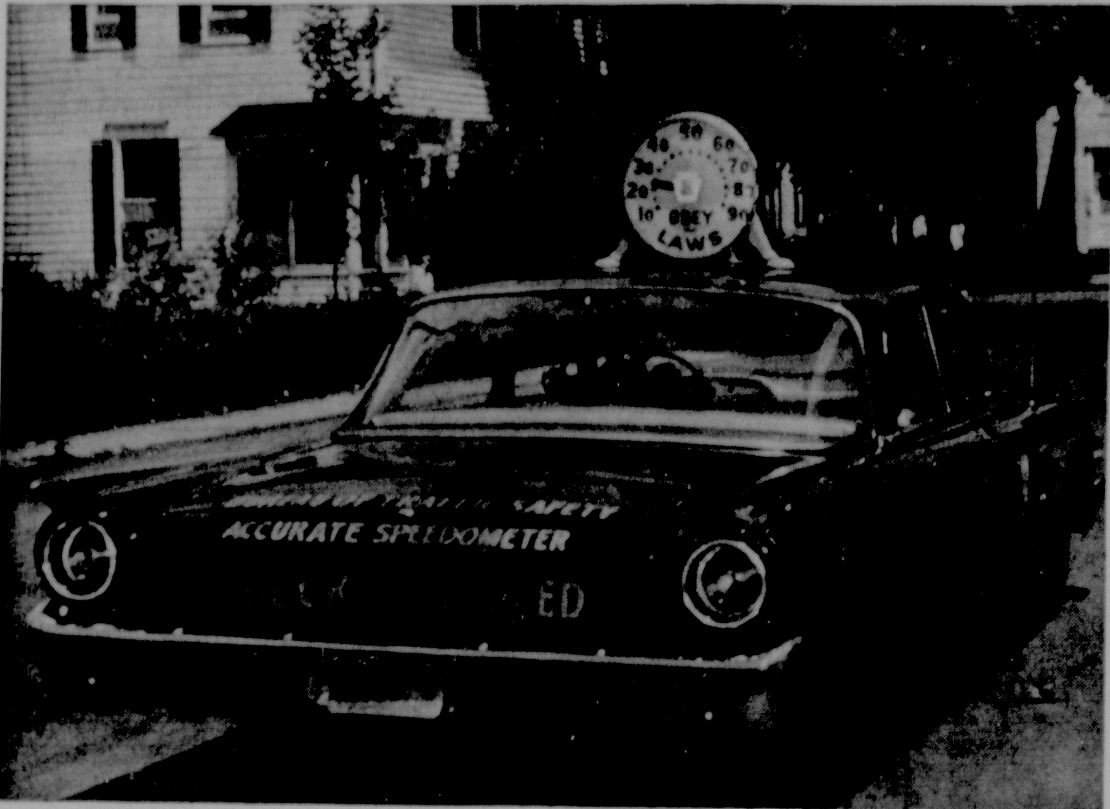

TROUBLED
Dear Troubled: Since the trouble-maker is your husband's mother, he should tell her emphatically that, unless she treats all your children equally, none of them will be available to her. But ease into it. Grandma may not be aware of the prejudice she's showing.

Dear Abby: My husband thinks that table wine is the same as grape juice, and he drinks it down like soda pop. I tell him wine should be sipped . . . not guzzled . . . but he says it is just the same as grape juice. We had some people in and he poured a ten-year-old boy a full glass of wine. I took it away from him. Afterwards I told him I didn't want him serving wine to children, and he gave me the same answer. "It is just the same as grape juice." How can I convince him he is wrong?

HENRY'S WIFE
Dear Wife: The alcohol content is plainly marked on every bottle of wine. Keep your eye on Henry. I think he's on the grape.

Confidential to Wedding Called off: Yes, you should return all the wedding gifts. The only "explanation" necessary is: "We have agreed to break our engagement."

What's bothering you? For a personal reply, write to Abby, care of The Daily Record. Include a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Safe Driving Reminder

HARRISBURG — A dramatic safe driving reminder "informs" motorists traveling Pennsylvania's main highways today.

O. D. Shipley, Commissioner of Traffic Safety, announced yesterday that eleven "Speedminder Cruisers," each specially equipped with an oversized speedometer clock mounted on the car roof, will periodically patrol all key arteries of travel in the Commonwealth.

The conspicuous speed clock, clearly visible to all vehicles in the traffic pattern, accurately indicates the speed at which the cruiser is traveling. Drivers approaching the cruiser from the rear or alongside will be able to check their own speed against that of the cruiser.

"These special cars with their big roof speedometers are designed to create 'speed consciousness' in the minds of all drivers," Shipley stated.

"Impact as the result of speed is still our Number One Killer. We hope that these Speedminder Cruisers will help prevent tragic accidents by reminding motorists to reduce their speed to within safe and lawful limits."

Stressing the reliability of the big speedometers, the Commissioner said: "In order to assure the greatest possible degree of accuracy, these devices will be specially calibrated every 30 days."

Chuck Connors stars as the "Rifleman" at 8 p.m. on ch. 6 and 7, when a young soldier is recaptured at his ranch after being wounded during an attempted escape from the guardhouse of a nearby military camp.

Andrey Meadows and Lea Tremayne co-star on "Alfred Hitchcock Presents" at 8:30 p.m. on ch. 3 and 4 in a drama in which a woman, seeking respite from her humdrum marriage to a doctor, makes monthly overnight visits to her "aunt." . . . Van Heflin, Raymond Massey, Cliff Robertson and Phyllis Thaxter co-star in "The Crucel Day," the "Playhouse 90" drama at 9:30 p.m. on ch. 2 and 10 which tells the story of a French Army captain who attempts to bring about a triumph of love and understanding over factional hatreds in Algeria.

Hoagy Carmichael is host for "Those Ragtime Years," the "Project 20" presentation at 10 p.m. on ch. 3 and 4 which dramatizes the ragtime craze which revolutionized American popular music and paved the way for jazz. . . . The first in a series of reruns on "Alcoa Presents" at 10 p.m. on ch. 6 and 7 will be "The Death Waltz," starring Elizabeth Montgomery and Robert Sampson in the tale of a "dead" Army lieutenant who returns to claim a dance with the girl who sent him to his death.

Marine Stabbed
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Rudolph Perrone, 19-year-old Marine corporal from the Red Bank, N.J., ammunition depot, was stabbed in the chest as he stood talking with a girl outside her home at 2:15 a.m. today. Police said Perrone quarreled with a relative of the girl who ordered her to go indoors. This man is being sought, police added.

Permanent Horse Show At West End

GILBERT—At a meeting of the West End Fair Association the directors voted their approval for the erection of a permanent horse show and cattle judging ring together with seating facilities to be erected at once.

The association, which has sponsored the horse shows of the Monroe County 4-H Horse and Pony Club since its inception, announced that the club will hold its annual show Wednesday, Aug. 30, starting at 1 p. m.

The association also announced that the first annual horse show open to all exhibitors of horses and ponies will be held Aug. 31, starting at 3 p. m. Charles Hendry, the chairman, reported that the prize lists and entry blanks are now in the hands of the printer and will be available shortly for distribution.

Further information may be had by contacting Henry at Gilbert. Phone number is Kresgeville 68-14389.

Mrs. John George Kontir

Dorothy Ubantz Bride Of John G. Kontir

Easton-St. Michael's Roman Catholic Church, Easton, was the scene of the July wedding of Miss Dorothy Charlotte Ubantz, foster daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Burstein, Bangor, to John George Kontir, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Kontir, Allentown.

Rev. Gaudin was officiated at the 2 p. m. nuptial mass on July 6.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of white organza styled with a portrait neckline and a princess panel of embroidery. Her white prayerbook carried white roses and chrysanthemums with stephanotis. Orange blossoms and organza held her veil of imported French silk illusions.

Mrs. Stanley Gronoski, Bangor, acted as best man. Donald Clark, Hokendauqua, and Steven Baron, Allentown, were ushers.

Prior to the ceremony, Professor Parkansky played a medley of wedding music. Mrs. Lester Price was soloist. Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held at Memorial Hall, Stroudsburg. On their return from the wedding trip, the couple will reside in Allentown.

Mrs. Kontir is a graduate of Bangor Area Joint High School and attended Haff Hospital School of Nursing. She is presently employed at Graceland, Nazareth.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Allen High School, Allentown, and served in the U. S. Air Force. He is presently employed by Western Electric, Allentown.

Recuperation Ordered For Policeman

State Clubs To Hold Seminar

It's "back to school" time again for members of the Pennsylvania Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. William A. Leech, Jr., of Pittsburgh, chairman of the Summer Conference Committee, will begin calling the "roll" promptly at 2:30 p. m. on Wednesday, July 19. The conference, fifth of its kind, will take place on the campus of Pennsylvania State University. It will conclude with the presentation of certificates by Mrs. Russell Clements of Wallingford, state president, at a closing luncheon to be held in the Nittany Lion Inn on Friday, July 21.

"The key to the future—the Americas," the theme of the conference is tangible proof of Pennsylvania clubwomen's desire to become "responsible, responsive citizens." Emphasis on the study of our Latin-American neighbors will provide a better understanding of their culture, politics and problems.

Among those to present a first-hand account will be Dr. Edward Borman, Chief Latin-American Program Division of the U. S. Department of State who will give the Keynote Address, "How the U. S. is Helping Friendly Neighbors." Dr. Cybele Gomes Grand who is a graduate of the University of Brazil and is currently a member of the Inter-American Defense Board in Washington, will speak.

A panel consisting of three graduate students from Latin-America will discuss "The Role of Women in Latin-America." The panel members are Miss Eida Badilla of Costa Rica, Miss Dora Elena Frutos of Paraguay and Miss Alida Garcia of Columbia. The moderator will be Joseph Alessandro, Assoc. Professor of Education and Director of Latin-America Supervisory Training Program for the University.

Miss Winifred I. Hammer, Catasauqua, vice president of the Northeast District PFWC will preside at the session to be held Thursday, July 20. Mrs. A. Kyle Kertseter of Allentown, PFWC chairman of "Dollars for Scholars" project which will provide funds for graduate study in the U. S. to Latin-American students will serve as recorder for the International Affairs Discussion Group on Thursday, July 20.

Pocono Visitor Passes Century Birthday

A two-tiered birthday cake was presented to Mrs. Margaret Wettstein by the management of the Indian Queen Hotel, where she is a guest.

Mrs. Wettstein turned past the century mark on May 25. A resident of South Ozone Park, L. I., with her son, F. William Wettstein, she and her son are regular visitors to the Poconos and have been for more than 25 years.

Born in Frankfurt, Germany, Mrs. Wettstein was widowed after 12 years of marriage and became the sole support of her three children. Talking of the first 50 years, she said, "I worked the first 50 and enjoyed the second 50."

Spry and pert, she attributes her long life to constant good health and contentment with her life.

At the family birthday celebration in May, her two great-grandchildren were present among the guests.

Mrs. Wettstein advised anyone who wishes to achieve the 100 mark to be content with life and not to worry.

Make-Up Demonstrator Once An Ugly Duckling

By Roberta Fleming Roesch

Sometimes earlier problems or handicaps can be switched to present-day advantages. So if you had problems to solve in childhood or adolescence, look into that period and see if experiences from those years can add up to work for you now.

"I can't honestly say that I consciously delved into my growing-up years and immediately pulled out the making of a job," admits Shirley Schonberg, an attractive young wife and mother who works as a cosmetic demonstrator in several towns in a large suburban area. "But that's the way things worked out for me and the reason I have my job."

Ugly Duckling
"I was such an ugly duckling child that my mother finally gave up trying to solve the problems I presented. By the time I was an adolescent, she took me to Philadelphia and turned me over to a cosmetician as a last resort."

Probably because Shirley had reached adolescence, she was at least a little receptive to caring how she looked. Consequently, when the cosmetician showed her make-up tricks suitable for her age, Shirley kept practicing until she learned how to bring out her best features and camouflage her worst ones.

Researched Possibilities
"I never forgot what that woman taught me," Shirley said. "From that time on I became so interested in what cosmeticians can do for a person that I made it a point to find out and try out all the new make-up trends and tricks that came along."

Never once, however, did Shirley regard her cosmetic training as job training.

Her working experience, before motherhood, was in the secretarial field, and the idea of taking any kind of job was the farthest thing from her mind, as she sat under a dryer in a beauty salon one afternoon. But while she was in the salon, the owner of a line of cosmetics offered to give Shirley a free make-up demonstration in order to show her the cosmetics.

As A Teen She Learned Cosmetic Tricks Suited To Her Age.

"I'll try out your cosmetics," Shirley told her. "But I want to make up my own face."

While the owner of the cosmetic line watched, Shirley went to work with the deft touches she'd acquired through the years, quite unaware that she was soon to be offered a job as a cosmetic demonstrator because of the make-up artistry she'd learned while overcoming an earlier problem.

job," Shirley said, "I've discovered that work as a demonstrator offers a woman a wonderful opportunity to get out and meet people and still arrange her schedule to fit her home life, too."

Her Duties
"I visit beauty shops throughout the area, give free make-up demonstrations and sell beauty products to customers. Besides this, I give demonstrations at church and civic meetings, make up models for fashion shows and occasionally run home demonstration parties."

(If you're interested in more information about work as a cosmetic demonstrator, send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope in care of this newspaper and I will send an address from which you can get details.)

The Wyckoff Shopper

The Wyckoff Shopper

All of us have heard the expression, "Now we'll stretch a point..." It's a nice, comfortable phrase, because it has GIVE to it. Like all things elastic, it promises comfort. There are some things that annoy us when they stretch, because they become loose and baggy. But sometimes it's wonderfully comforting to think of the little bit of lee-way "stretching a point" can give—both in human relations and in our material possessions.

I'd never really consider the word "stretch" until I saw it grabbing out at me from the label of a bottle in our handbag department. "Liquid Leather Stretch," I read, "for Tight Shoes and Gloves." Imagine!—You can buy controlled stretching in a spray bottle for only 1.00. In a matter of 30-seconds you can ease the tightness out of shoes, gloves, or other leather accessories, with no real effect at all. Just thought I'd tell you, since you may have overlooked the display.

I wonder if liquid Leather Stretch would loosen a belt that's snug? Maybe not. Perhaps one must still diet for that.

Yesterday I wrote of books, but did I mention the variety of bookmarks we sell at Wyckoff's? Some are of silk with woven verses... some, at 25c, are of leather... some are in the form of a metal clip... and, to delight the children, there are red cord or leather thong bookmarks from which dangle whimsical cats, children, or other ornamentation of carved, handpainted wood. These are 25c and 50c, and some little girls wear them as necklaces, I'm told... I didn't mention COOK BOOKS either, did I, but we have them in all weights and sizes, both hard-covered and paper-covered. In the latter, at 55c, there are at least four devoted solely to Pennsylvania Dutch dishes, and Marge Hunt tells me her husband highly approves the recipes of one particularly. At 35c, we have a Chinese Cook Book that intrigues me. I do love Chinese food—and so would you if you had accompanied "Papa" Wyckoff to his favorite dining room in Chinatown.

The style is new, but every time I look at the marked down Sleeping Coat by Schrank on one of the tables in our lingerie department, I think of Great Grandma's quilt. The tiny floral print is mustard yellow with black tracings, on a brilliant red ground. Shades of Aunt Dinah's quilting party! The price of this sleep coat with its yellow buttons and rick rack trim was 6.00, but I noticed it is now marked down to 4.00. A real good buy, and a gay one.

Our new shipment of Schrank muu-muus, at 2.98, also intrigues me, and I regret my height—I'm just a bit too tall for them. My favorites are the very big floral print, and the demure, smocked prints.

In our cosmetics department, Esther Ainspac took time to show me the "first time ever" special by Elizabeth Arden of her incredibly fine Velve Moisture Film. This moisturizer is a must for under every makeup base, and prior to now it was sold in a 5.00 size. In order to better acquaint the public with this beauty aid, Arden now has bottled a limited amount at 1.50. Why not get acquainted?... Esther also tells me to pass the word along about how very refreshing Beauty Ice is during the hot summer months. This jelly like substance in a cool blue-green shade, moisturizes the skin and tightens the pores as a perfect preliminary to makeup... Also in cosmetics you'll find a special by Coty combining the Flair compact and the Coty 60-Second Facial, at 1.35. They are packaged neatly together. The 60-Second Facial is also available alone in tubes at 1.50... New too, is the Revlon mascara with revolving brush that actually separates and grooms the lashes as they are tinted. Colors are lovely, price is 2.00.

Fluttering Hemlines Permit Mobility

By Bobby Westbrook
Daily Record Family Fare Editor

New York — Couture designers are out to make news this year, not by the length of their hemlines (they're still short) but by the mobility of the hemline (they flutter, particularly sideways). Or so members of the nation's fashion press decided at the opening forum of National Press Week, sponsored by the New York Couture Group at the Hotel Pierre.

Modern abstract sculpture — particularly mobiles — will influence the collections for Fall and Winter, Eleanor Lambert, director of the Couture Group, indicated. She could point to the subtle movement of skirts—circular, pleated, flounced or flared below the knees as illustrating this new freedom movement.

"Freedom suits," she labeled one group with short jackets and easy fit. Coats, she forecast, will move in for closer fit in front with the fullness reserved for the back. Jackets have a tendency to be longer but are fitted higher under the bosom.

The oval line of last year is being replaced by triangles, Pyramid skirts, for instance, reflect a strong Egyptian influence, a form of abstract art predating history.

In the winter coats, the trend was toward double-breasted or side closings, side-slanted collars, and more fit. Coat sleeves remain short—never as long as wrist-length. Often they are cut to resemble capes.

Skirt fullness in dresses is being achieved through panels, pleats or low-placed flares. The new mobility is often emphasized by fur hems, or bands of beaded embroidery or contrasting fabric at the hemline.

Fabric, too, she forecast, is taking its inspiration from modern sculpture with emphasis on texture: ridged, puffed, blistered, carved or cross-woven with deep-piled fabrics very important.

Apricot and some candy colors usually reserved for Spring were surprise colors among the deep autumnal shades of: green, ranging from spruce to evergreen; berry tones from strawberry to grape; and brown from amber to walnut. Bi-colors combined such off-beat shades as red with sapphire blue; red with orange; fuchsia with pink.

Prophecies included the rising waistline, the return of sleeves, the reappearance of the fishtail train, uneven hemlines and a covered-up look.

The Millinery and Shoe Institutes have keyed their Fall styles in harmony with the new styles.

Deep, head-hugging cloches, side-slanted turbans, off-the-face big-rimmed hats worn over sleek hair-does were strongly reminiscent of the '30's haunted by Greta Garbo and Carole Lombard.

Movie star furbelows were also nostalgic: ostrich feathers, fluffy fur trimmings, cowl and scarf necklines, big brooches and dangling earrings.

In shoes, the pointed toe is still predominant but its crusading adversaries may take slight comfort from the announcement that this winter they will at least have a choice of pointed toes:

Squared-off flattened toes, often with extended soles, are appearing in walking shoes; a sort of crescent or biscuit toe (still a far cry from the round baby-toe) is appearing in shoes for daytime; but after-five shoes still make a point.

The fashion show presented by the International Silk Assn. at their opening dinner could have been designed as copy-book illustrations of Miss Lambert's "look-for" forum. In addition, with the surprise presentation from the collection of world famous Norman Norell, the press saw some of her prophecies translated into dresses: high waisted, elegant, and — to tell the truth — a little startling like the Vampire Lady as worn by models with sleek coiffures and no busts.

Just Between Us

by Bobby Westbrook

For the nation's fashion press, fresh from reporting society news—mostly of the small "s" variety which includes firemen's carnivals and strawberry festivals, the fantasy of Fashion week begins even before the formal couture openings.

Fresh from their own kitchens, they may spare a moment's thought to how the St. Regis manages to keep the veal kidneys so tender for the Matchabelli brunch. Greeting fellow workers of former years takes on the feeling of the opening Women's Club luncheon as you recognize where they got the jewelry, hats or costumes they are wearing.

But at Sally Victor's millinery show with her side-perched cloches over sleek, flapper-like coiffures, unreality begins to set in. All right, so the models look oddly pin-headed to eyes accustomed to bouffant heads, but the press begins sniffing the air for trends.

Reality intrudes briefly as editors from the northern tier recognize how last winter's record-breaking cold may have affected milliners—many of these hats are going to keep your ears warm—well, one ear, anyway.

However, last winter can't be blamed for the sleeveless sheaths of black leather which all of Emme's models wore under black antelope jockey caps, saddle-stitched in sequins, if you please.

John Fredericks took off for outer space with a brilliant Space Blue, (the color of the cornflower buttons his guests were given), with hour-glass hats, crowing Chanticleer hats, globes, or special veil and feather duo.

Not practical? Why his feathers are de-asthmized!

The fashion press may not know how the Berlin situation is shaping up but they know what Hildegard wore to commentate the millinery show—and could see Miss America and Carol Knox at the next table. The only saving grace is that this early in Press Week, the reporters know they are still dreaming.

If you don't believe me, ask Jean Kiefer who helped cart my typewriter to town and got a glimpse of some of the early shenanigans and a lot of the early fashion editors. Few of us look the part, I'm afraid, but after all our job is to report fashion trends not set them. There is one practical note about all this, however. Sally Victor, celebrating her 25th anniversary, went back to some of her original creations this year and found them just as high-style as ever. Couture fashions do last forever—if you hang on to them long enough for forever to get here.

S-F Candlestick Park Hosts 30th All-Star Game

Starters Are Ford And Spahn As Richards, Murtaugh Pilot

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Warren Spahn, Milwaukee's crafty veteran, will face 16-game winner Whitey Ford of the New York Yankees Tuesday as both the National and American leagues turn to left-handed pitching to start the 30th annual All-Star Baseball Game at Candlestick Park.

Spahn's choice by Manager Danny Murtaugh of Pittsburgh was somewhat of a surprise, for the 40-year-old winner of 296 games has been having trouble lately and his season win-loss record is an ordinary 8-11.

Ford's selection by Manager Paul Richards of Baltimore was a foregone conclusion long before Monday's official announcement. The chunky blond is having a sensational season, with a 16-2 record, and has won his last 10 starts.

The American League is favored on the left-handed power of sluggers like Roger Maris and Mickey Mantle of the Yankees and Norm Cash of Detroit in a park where the usual jet stream wind to right favors left-handed batters.

San Francisco's first All-Star game will draw a sellout crowd of about 43,000 fans to the two-year-old park on the bay. Gate receipts and television money from this game and a second game July 31 at Boston go into the majors' central fund, which supports the player pension plan. The game will be carried on network (NBC) radio and television. Game time is 1 p.m. (3 p.m. EST).

Richards and Murtaugh take different approaches to the game. The American League manager says he has no intention of using anybody except the eight starters picked by the players, coaches and managers unless the game demands players. The eight starters must play at least three innings unless injured.

No pitcher can go more than three innings except in extraordinary games. But, of course, the starter might be chased in the first.

Asked if the idea of the game hadn't been to show the All-Star talent to the fans, Richards answered, "That might have been the theory in the past and it might be next year. I always felt that the theory of the game is to win. Is there any other?"

Richards would not go beyond Ford in his pitching plans.

"It will depend on how the game progresses, starting with the first hitter," he said.

Ford and Billy Pierce of Chicago are the only southpaws on the American League staff. This will be Ford's sixth All-Star game, including starts in 1954 and 1960. His record is 0-2.

Murtaugh also emphasized that he is out to win, but said he will make several switches as the game progresses.

"We're sure as hell going to try to win," said Murtaugh. "We all have different ideas about this game. The ideal plan would be to win and also to let the people see all the players."

"I know Eddie Mathews (Milwaukee third baseman) will play only three innings. He has 14 stitches in his leg from a spike wound but he wants to play. After three innings, I'll bring in Ken Boyer of St. Louis. We have a lot of boys with recognized ability. No matter what players I use, it wouldn't weaken our team."

"We have the perfect team for this type of game, with speed, great defense, power and pitching. Maybe they have more power over a season, but I think we have the potential for one game."

Murtaugh said he picked Spahn because he had plenty of rest. He said Spahn, Sandy Koufax of Los Angeles and Bob Purkey of Cincinnati have been considered for starters but Koufax was eliminated when he pitched Sunday. Purkey probably will be the second pitcher, followed by Elroy Face of Pittsburgh.

This will be Spahn's seventh All-Star game and third start.

Although the National has won 9 of the last 13, including both games in 1960, the American still has a 16-13 edge in this series which it used to dominate.

ALL-STAR POWER—New York Yankees Roger Maris, left, and Mickey Mantle, top home run hitters in the American League and starters in the all-star game in San Francisco July 11, await turns in batting practice at the Yankee Stadium in New York. Maris, who has 33 homers, will bat fourth in the American League lineup behind Mantle who has 29.

Pender Favorite Over Downes In Return Bout

By GEOFF MILLER
Associated Press Sports Writer
LONDON (AP) — Rangy Paul Pender of Brookline, Mass., was rated a 7-4 favorite Monday night to defeat Terry Downes of London again in their return 15-round bout for the American's share of the world middleweight championship Tuesday night.

Despite Pender's decisive, seventh-round technical knockout of the aggressive cockney in Boston last Jan. 14, promoter Harry Levene was assured of a sellout crowd of 12,000 at Wembley's Indoor Stadium.

Pender will be risking his piece of the 160-pound division crown for the fourth time and for the first time out of Boston. The former fireman is recognized as champion in New York, Massachusetts and Europe. Gene Fullmer, of West Jordan, Utah, is considered champion by the American National Boxing Association.

For the return bout, Pender will receive a guarantee of $84,000. Downes will collect $28,000. But if the British mauler scores an upset, his purse will be put in a New York bank to guarantee Pender a return fight in Boston within 90 days.

On form, Pender figures to win as easily as he did in Boston. He floored Terry in the first round and had him bleeding from multiple cuts of the nose and eyebrows when the referee halted the bloody bout. Downes required 15 stitches, 12 on his split nose.

Pender has won 14 consecutive fights over a 1½-year span for a 39-5-2 record. Downes, a professional only five years, has a 27-7 record. He has been stopped five times by cuts.

All-Star Bulletin

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Ken McBride of the Los Angeles Angels Monday replaced Ryne Duren on the American League All-Star team for Tuesday's baseball game with the National League All-Stars here.

Duren was called home by the death of his infant son in San Antonio, Tex.

Joe Cronin, president of the American League, and Manager Paul Richards of Baltimore picked McBride, a 25-year-old right-hander, who has won eight and lost five, defeated Detroit Friday.

He was acquired from Chicago Dec. 14 for $75,000 when the Angels were stocked with players from other American League teams. He had brief service with the White Sox.

This is his first All-Star game.

Open Links Mark Broke; Not By Player, Palmer

By JOHN FARROW

Associated Press Sports Writer

BIRKDALE, England (AP) —

American Arnold Palmer and

South African Gary Player scored identical 71s, but they took a back seat Monday to a couple of comparative unknowns in the first qualifying round of the British

Open Golf Championship.

Bob Charles, 25, a New Zealand

from Scotland, each broke the record of the 6,844-yard Birkdale course with 6-under-par 66. The old record of 67 was set by

Britain's Syd Scott in the 1954

British Open at Birkdale.

But the qualifying scores of the first two days won't count when the field of more than 350 is pared to 120 for the start of the 72-hole championship proper on Wednesday. Fourteen Americans started.

Palmer, 29, a power hitter from

Latrobe, Pa., and Player, 25, winner of the U.S. Masters this year and a former British Open champion, still are the favorites to win the title, first contested 101 years ago.

Experts forecast that the title race tests between these two men

—so different in manner but so alike in dedication to the game—

who lead the money-winning list on the American pro circuit.

Palmer and Player both toured the adjoining Hillside course, which has a 6,603-yardage and a similar par to Birkdale's 36-36—

72, in 37-34-71.

Those who played Birkdale Monday will play Hillside Tuesday and vice versa.

Dave Talbot, an unheralded

Briton, and Dave Thomas, a leading Welsh pro, had 67s over the reconstructed Hillside course, setting records for that layout.

About 25 players had scores of 70 or lower, including four-time winner Bobby Locke of South Africa with a 70.

The leading American in the first round was Joe Ezar, the trick shot-specialist from Miami.

He started out with four fives and then scattered birdies right and left for a 37-33-70 at Hillside.

Palmer, quickly making himself a favorite with the fans, played an incident-riddled round in the rain. At the sixth green he lined up a tricky 6-footer and then broke off in annoyance as spectators chattered.

He walked to the edge of the green and lined up the putt again

—stroking it in just as a train roared by 30 yards behind him.

On the 14th and 16th greens

Palmer was bothered by a movie photographer who stood near him with his camera whirring. Palmer

finally asked him politely to move out of earshot and allow him to concentrate.

As he doled out autographs to the fans, Palmer said with a grin:

"I wasn't driving well, my irons were not good and my putting wasn't really good. But otherwise

I played very well."

Former Dodger Pitcher Reminisces About Hugh Casey And Hemingway In Cuba

Ed. Note: Hugh Casey was a frequent visitor to the Pocono Mountains. He used to hunt and fish in this area.

By BOB TALBERT
Written for The Associated Press

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP)—"In the spring of 1941 we were training down in Cuba and we would go up into the mountains and shoot pigeons with Ernest Hemingway and sometimes there would be boxing and all the time there would be drinking."

The speaker was Kirby Higbe of Columbia, former Brooklyn Dodgers pitcher, now a semipro umpire in South Carolina.

Higbe was recalling the team's spring training stint in Cuba and their visits with Hemingway, who died from a shotgun blast a week ago. The ex-major leaguer was struck by a similarity of the author's death to that of Hugh

Casey, then a Dodger pitcher too. "Hugh Casey—he was Hemingway's favorite, Billy Herman, Augie Galan, myself, Mickey Owen, and sometimes Leo Durocher, we'd go up to Hemingway's place four, maybe five times a week," Higbe recalls. "Mostly it was Hugh and me."

"A lot of times we'd just go up to Hemingway's house and sit around and talk and drink. Just about every time, Hemingway would turn to Hugh and say, 'All right, fat boy, let's put on the gloves.'"

"You should have seen it. Casey was a big bull, weighed around 235 to 240 and was fast even though he looked slow. Hemingway, at that time, must have weighed 255 to 260 pounds. He had that beard and it was gray and all."

"And they weren't wearing those big pillow gloves, either."

Six or eight-ounce gloves. They would go at it right in the living room.

"Once, Mrs. Hemingway had bought this new sofa. It was a big thing and pretty, too. Well, both Hemingway and Casey could really belt."

"They would knock each other down, get up and do it again. This time in particular, Casey caught Hemingway and belted him clean across the living room into the sofa and the sofa broke in two."

"You would have liked Hemingway. He was a big, rugged-looking outdoor sportsman. He was an everyday guy. No bull with him. He talked just like you and I do. I never saw Hemingway drunk. And I never saw him get mad. Now if it'd been me in there fighting like he and Hugh did, I'd have got mad. But they were like two young bulls. They loved that combat. Smacking each other around for fun.

"Hemingway loved anything rough and tough. That's why he liked of Hugh so."

"When I heard he had shot himself I got to thinking. Thinking back to 1951. Hugh Casey took a shotgun to a hotel room in Atlanta and blew his brains out."

"Then when I read where Hemingway had died in that shotgun accident, I remembered how those two—Hemingway and Casey—looked, belting each other around that living room in Cuba."

"If you had seen them like that—loving life and living it to the hilt—you'd never thought it would have been a shotgun end for either of them. You'd have never thought it."

Patterson To Fight In Elks' Show

THE SCRANTON Elks Charity Boxing Show, scheduled for the Memorial Stadium in that city, on Monday night, July 17, has received assurances that Ray Patterson, brother of world's heavyweight champion Floyd, will participate in one of the 10 bouts booked for that night.

Patterson, who is starting his career exactly the same way as did his brother, is currently the Golden Gloves national champion, and is also a heavyweight. He was secured through the good offices of Cuz D'Amato, the world champion's manager, and will be placed in the feature bout of the night.

Patterson's opponent will most likely be secured from Philadelphia. A number of celebrities in the boxing world will also be among those present. The latest to offer his services is Johnny Adcock, the renowned announcer in Madison Square Garden, and who does the "speaking" for most of the championship fights. Pete Latzo, Mickey Walker, and Carmen Basilio, all former champions, have already agreed to come.

Five definite bouts have already been booked.

Top Thinclad Admits Earnings

STOCKHOLM (AP)—Sweden's top track and field star, miler Dan Waern, earned $4,000 for running during 1959, tax authorities claimed Monday, and Waern's lawyer admitted that Waern has violated amateur rules.

The lawyer added, however, that Waern is a victim of obsolete rules, which are ignored by every leading sports star. He said that if Waern is reported for professionalism, every foreign athlete who has received money for competing in Sweden should be reported by the Swedish Track Association.

HOW DO HEAT STROKE AND HEAT EXHAUSTION DIFFER?

A. HEAT STROKE VICTIM HAS A HOT, DRY SKIN AND A HIGH FEVER. USE COLD WET CLOTHS ON HIM. A HEAT EXHAUSTION VICTIM IS PALE, WET, AND CLAMMY. HE NEEDS SIPS OF SALT DRINKS. CALL A DOCTOR FOR BOTH.

Monmouth Net Topping Last Year

OCEANPORT, N.J.—Monmouth Park reached the half-way mark in its 1961 meeting Friday and attendance and mutual figures are running slightly ahead of those of last season to date.

With 443,201 fans present in the first 25 days, there is an increase of 17,381 over the 425,820 of a year ago. This is a 4 per cent increase. In wagering a total of $38,967,061 this season is 9/10ths of one per cent better than the $38,595,897 of 1960 or in actual dollars, $371,164.

Highest single day attendance during the first half of the meet came on July 3 when 31,021 turned out and they bet $2,457,674 for the season's high. Highest daily double pool so far is $283,784 set June 17 and the biggest one-race pool came in the Miss Woodford Stakes July 3, $386,917.

Sports Car Hits Crowd

POMONA, Calif. (AP)—A racing car spurted into the lead at the Pomona fairgrounds Sunday, careened out of control on a sharp turn and slammed into the crowd. The driver and 12 spectators were injured, three critically.

The driver, Elden Drake, 39, of Los Angeles, was hurled from the sports car as it mowed down spectators and rammed into automobiles parked behind the crowd. Drake suffered a concussion and back injuries.

An official said the accident was blamed on a faulty steering mechanism.
